uable Property for Sale.

iber being desirous of removing to the country, offers for sale, the following of LAND, in Fairfax county, Virginia.

Tract on which he resides, containing 740 acres, 5 miles below Alexandria, within one mile of Potomac river, is the neighborhood; the land is level and adapted to the production of Indian corn, and other small grain. The improvements are, a large and commodious dwelling, two stories high, 54 feet long and 24 feet wide, with four rooms and a passage to the river; a good kitchen, meat house, ice-house, and every other necessary; a good garden, apple & peach trees, and about 40 acres of excellent timothy hay, and as much more may be made at the expense. Also, an overseer's house, a granary, &c.

Other Tract, containing about 6 miles below Alexandria, divided into 9 or 10 hands, the buildings on these farms consist of negro quarters, granaries, &c. There are 40 or 50 acres of good timothy hay well enclosed, and a great deal of land to be made at a trifling expense; the land is level and fertile, with an abundance of water. This tract is allowed, by those who own it, to be equal, if not superior, to any other in this part of the country, and will be sold entire, or divided,
at the most convenient.

Other Tract near the last mentioned, containing 402 acres, rented to a tenant, a considerable portion of which is in soil good. There are on it, two mills, and commanding situations for a mill, and a meadow from which one of the mills draws water. There are about 325 Acres below Alexandria, through which a leading from the river to Richmond would be an excellent stand for a mill, being none at this time between Alexandria and Colchester, a distance of 16 miles.

Other Tract near the last, containing 400 acres. Both the last mentioned are likewise rented to tenants and produce good corn, wheat, and other crops, and there is on each of them a considerable quantity of excellent timothy hay, from which the tenants sell a great deal. For terms, apply to the sub-

April 3.

4031—1805

It should be remembered that there are very strong reasons to believe that the Rochefort Squadron was to have co-operated with the fleet now in the West Indies. By a comparison of dates it is evident that the first time the Toulon fleet left port, it was purposed that there should be a general coalition to effect some important end. The violence of the weather obliged the latter to return—whilst Masséna kept on his course, & prepared the way, by the consternation which was then excited for the subsequent attacks on the islands by a second arrival. Altho' there is much evidence in favor of the conclusion that the Rochefort Squadron has left its station, and returned to France—yet that point is not placed beyond all doubt—and he may again appear to increase the alarm which must now be felt throughout all the islands. It cannot be disputed that if the fleets had formed a junction in February they would have probably injured the British islands much more than they will be able to do at present—it is true the English force is but small, and cannot resist the superiority of the enemy—18 sail of the line and 9 frigates, (especially if Masséna should unite with them) are a force irresistible; and which will successfully terrify the inhabitants, borrow their property, and then most probably retire—to reiterate the same manoeuvres in another part of the world. The plan of which this expedition forms a portion—will be renowned in the history of this war, as a masterpiece of consummate policy in design, dexterity in its progress, and dispatch in performing the intentions of those who framed it.

The principal cause of the damage which may be done is the security of the British government; whilst they were boasting that every ship of war of France was safely lodged in harbor; they took no precautions to secure their colonies against the sudden attack of an enemy;—the whole of whose movements in times past has evinced the promptness with which he conceives and the decision & celerity with which he acts. The probability of the West Indies being the point of attack, will soon bring another British fleet into those seas, and although there is little ground to believe that this was seriously meant by Bonaparte to be the seat of war, yet if it has the effect to induce the ministry to order from Europe, a large maritime force for the protection of the islands; the object will be partly accomplished. When all the circumstances connected with this event are contemplated. It must be allowed to be in every respect one of the most unpleasant which could have occurred. It has now become undeniable that Bonaparte so far as the resources of the French Empire will allow him, is determined to humble the British; conscious that this was not to be attained by open war at sea, upon an extended scale, he uses every means to weary, alarm and exhaust them. During the two years of war, whilst the one has been constantly on the alert, and squandering money with the most lavish profusion, the other has been at ease, concentrating all its operations, and combining all its energies in preparing vessels of war, which although they cannot conquer, may immensely distress and annoy those whom they are commanded to attack; and when we consider the vast difference between the two countries, we must allow that fifty sail of the line in the hands of Bonaparte are a large force, which may change the whole face of the war.

The British in time of war are always in need of a very large number of fighting vessels to protect their trade. A very considerable portion of the English navy is constantly employed in convoying the merchantmen to and from their particular places of destination: this lessens the disposable force of the country in a very great degree. But this is not the case with France, having little to do in the mercantile world and that principally through the medium of the United States, who carry for those engaged in exporting and importing, their vessels of war have no other engagements than to fight, attack or plunder their enemies, according to the views of the executive—for instance Masséna is ordered to the W. Indies to commit all the depredation in his power, and to do every possible injury to the British trade. Cochrane is dispatched after him; but the work is finished, the weak islands are plundered, the vessels are captured and destroyed, and the enemy retired with the booty. But as a large quantity of property is waiting to be shipped to England, five men of war are a convoy to the fleet, leaving the islands in exactly the same defenceless state as previous to Cochrane's arrival. There is no fleet of merchantmen sailing from England which does not require a convoy; and that force must now be considerably augmented on account of the number of French ships out of port.

The anticipation of the news which the defenceless state of the West Indies authorised the merchants to expect, had previous to our last advices excited the most serious apprehensions and the most distressing anxiety. That all the trade with the islands will be entirely stopped when a full detail reaches London, is probably saying too much; but that it will have a tendency to damp the ardor, and to unnerve the vigor of commercial enterprise in a very great degree is so plain, as not to want any kind of argument to prove the fact. And if it is productive of tremor in London, we must suppose that it includes affairs of no trifling consequence with regard to the trade of the United States. The increase of ships of war in the West Indies, should excite the utmost vigilance in our health officers to hinder the importation of disease. That the ravages of war will be accompanied with the raging of disease is self evident, it requires therefore a more than usual care with regard to those vessels which arrive from any port in the islands. The seeds of disease are strewn so plentifully throughout the warm climates, that the most trifling irregularity will sometimes bring forth all the pains of those pestilential diseases, which are certainly increased if not engendered by the indiscretions of certain modes of living, and by indulgences altogether incompatible with the warmth in which we are obliged to live. This is one very important effect which it may be presumed will result from the additions of two large fleets in the West India seas, provided they stay any length of time, for it has always been found impracticable to restrain the common soldiers and sailors from excesses which frequently carry off the sufferer in too short a time to admit even of proper remedies being tried and administered.

It may be asked, whether any ordinance adding an additional time to the present quarantine regulations would not be of service, so far as the health of the city is at stake; an object of primary importance, and to which every thing else should submit.

But this idea alone will have a strong tendency to lessen the West India trade: the danger will be a prohibition to those who are employed in navigating the vessels; the risk will powerfully operate upon the mind of the merchant, and the detention at last in the quarantine ground, will all induce a diminution for a time, of this profitable branch of commerce.

The combined fleets have justly excited much terror in the West Indies. Exposed to all the depredation of an enemy, willing to improve the advantage es which they at present possess; they have no other alternative but to quietly submit to their fate, and make the compromise upon the best terms upon which they can effect it. It was much wished, and indeed many reports seemed to confirm the relation a little, that Lord Nelson had been close after the enemy, as to render it highly probable that the time of their arrival among the islands, was so near each other that the plan of the combined fleet must be frustrated. But intelligence via Boston, positively asserts that on the twenty second of April, twelve days after, they had left Cadiz. Nelson had had not been heard of at Gibraltar which gives the French and Spanish admirals time to consult their measures and strike some blow which may produce a very lasting impression.

The quantity of troops on board, the rank of the officers commanding the expedition, and several collateral circumstances—all induce a degree of belief that Jamaica will not be omitted in their operations; and that that is indeed a prominent object in view, and which will repay the most unpleasant loss which an attack upon it might occasion. As the troops landed from the Rochefort Squadron in the city of St. Domingo must have been insufficient for its defence and security against the blacks unless there were some grand attempt to be made it would be superfluous to send ten thousand men to the French West Indies, which are strongly guarded, & amply provided with every thing necessary to withstand the force which might be sent against them. That conquest in the case of Jamaica is the intention, if any attack is to be made upon that island at all can easily be demonstrated. There is no other island worth retention, there is no other island which offers allurements to Bonaparte's ambition, not that it will at all enrich the French nation, but it will be sensibly felt as a great drawback upon the trade and revenue, and nothing is more probable than that if a French force should succeed in obtaining possession of the island, the negroes and aborigines will immediately follow the example of their brethren in St. Domingo. On the subject of the W. I. most men are interested, and all wish that affairs should take such a turn as to promote their individual advantage, this warps the judgement, and makes them believe that to be true which existed in their imaginations only, and to this may be imputed the immense quantity of floating opinions with regard to the commercial regulations of this country, and the manner in which they will be affected by these various movements. Those who have been employed in any branch of business, and have found it very profitable, seldom wish to quit it, and hence it is that in opposition to all the risk the trade with the Haytians is persisted in, and always will as long as any probability of remuneration exists;—but it can be demonstrated with very little trouble that in the aggregate there must be a very great loss; a trade which cannot be carried on without twenty-five per cent insurance is worse than none at all and although one may be a gainer, ten others or the under writers are losers.

NEW-YORK, June 17.

The ship America, captain Stetson, arrived last evening at the quarantine ground from Liverpool, which place he left the 12th of May. Captain S. brought no London papers later than the ship Ardent from Greenock.

Captain Delano who arrived last evening from Lisbon, is the bearer of dispatches for government.

Captain D. informs that the French and Spanish fleets doubled Cape St. Vincent on the 23d of April, and it was supposed they had gone to the northward, but no correct information had been received of their destination.

On the 3d of May, the only two British packets were dispatched from Lisbon to inform admiral Craig, in the Channel, of the movements of the French and Spanish fleets. On the 5th of May, 40 sail of British transports, convoyed by two men of war and 4 frigates, anchored in Casca Bay, a little to the southward of the Rock of Lisbon; they are part of the expedition that failed under the command of Sir J. Craig, bound for Gibraltar and Malta, with troops for the garrisons. On the 8th of May, Captain D. left the mouth of the river, and the fleet of transports crossing the bay bound up to Lisbon Roads.

Captain D. further informs, that a war was shortly expected to take place between Portugal and France.

BALTIMORE, June 17.

The editors of the Baltimore American have been politely favored with the following extract from the log-book of the Maryland, capt. Murphy:

On the 6th June, at 5 P. M. got under way from Jeremie with the fleet, consisting of the following vessels—ships Neptune, Taylor, of Philadelphia; Maria, Calvert, do. schooner Superior, How, of Baltimore—[the above vessels were armed]—schooner Hetty, Stanly, do. Imperial, Everson, do. brig Isabella, White, do. brig Comet of Norfolk, and sloop Harriot of Portland. On the 8th, at about 8 P. M. the Isabella sprung a leak, and before they could stop it, had upwards of five feet water in the hold; the fleet gave every assistance possible, and in a short time pumped her out. The leak was occasioned by a rat hole under the starboard quarter, below the bends. On the 9th, Tortuga, bearing E. were chased by two French privateers, one of which sails very fast, and who came pretty near us; they hauled her wind and joined the other; at 10, they bore away again, apparently to bring the ships to action, but before they got within gun shot, discovered it would not answer, therefore hauled to the southward and westward, and left us. At same time the S. W. end of Henega bore north On the 11th, passed Maguana, and at 9 A. M. we left the fleet in company with the schooners Hetty and Imperial. Same evening lost sight of the Hetty, she steering more to the westward. On the 13th, fell in with a small sail, which gave chase to us. It being thick and squally, we hauled to the westward and the Imperial to the northward and eastward, by this means we separated and saw her no more. On the 16th, at 4 P. M. saw Cape Hat-teras Light House, bearing N. W. distance about 4 leagues, and on the 17th, at P. M. passed Cape Henry. At midnight the sloop Diana, captain Lewis, 20 sail, from Martinique bound to Alexandria requested us to report the ship Lucy Ann, leaving that place with him for a market. The sehr. —, Penrice was to sail from Martinico, the day after him for Baltimore.

June 18.

The Charlotte, Morton, hence, has arrived at Laguna. Arrived, sehr. Prudence, Glavery, 20 days from Gallean Bay, Martinique. Left at St. Pierre, schooner Fanny, Penrice, and a number of American vessels. Sailed in company with schooner Neptune, Webb, for New-York. The French Squadron were still at Fort-Royal on the 25th ult. where they had been for more than a week. They had not attempted any enterprise, nor were their intentions known when the Prudence failed. The embargo was raised on the 25th ult. at St. Pierre and Fort-Royal, and on the 27th at Trinity and Gallean Bay.

Also, ship Neptune, Faherty, 17 days from Martinique, Porto Rico. Sailed in co. with brig Providence, of Providence, for Baltimore. Left schooner Enterprise, Hall, of Boston, under tri- schooner Neptune, Webb, for New-York. Expected to be cleared; schooner Anna, of Baltimore, brought in there, cargo discharged, and sent down to Porto Rico in ballast. June 18, lat. 32, long. 69, spoke schooner Prosperity, from Baltimore for West Indies.

Also, schooner Polly and Fanny, Osborn, 10 days from St. Augustine. The schooner Eliza, Cook, failed for Newbern 6 days before. On the 4th, 5th and 6th instant, a small Spanish privateer of 2 guns, 8 swivels and 40 men, bro't in there, the ship Golden Crown, from Norfolk to Liverpool with naval stores; brig Cyrus, from do. to Jamaica; and ship Polly and Betsey, from do. to Bermuda, all British vessels.

Also, ship Martha, Burns, 24 days from Baltimore, and 9 from Royal Island, Panama. Left at Caracas, brig Minerva, Parsons, Katory, Miss, and Mary, of New Port, R. I. brought in by French privateers, condemned and sold. Also, brig Twins, of New York, cargo discharged and vessel stripped of every thing, but not condemned. The schooner Martha and Mary, of Baltimore, arrived about a week before the Martha failed; passed a brig and sehr. in the bay, bound up.

June 19.

Arrived, schooner Maryland, Murphy, thirteen days from Jeremie. Sailed in co. with and under convoy of ships Neptune and Maria, of Philadelphia; schooner Nonfuch, How, for Baltimore; brig Isabella, Craig, do. sehr. Mary, land, Murphy, do. Defiance, Hollis, do. Imperial, Everson, do. brig Corner, of Norfolk, and sloop Harriet, of Portsmouth, (N. H.)—The following evening, Captain White, of the Isabella, spoke the Neptune, and requested assistance of one of his carpenters, as the brig had sprung a leak and had 5 feet water in her hold; assistance was sent immediately from most of the vessels in the fleet, and the leak (which was found to be between wind and water) was immediately stopped.

The Orion and Eclipse were at Jacmel, and expected at Jeremie in a few days. The Potomac had not arrived, nor was there any news of the June and Antelope.

Also, brig Providence, Allen, in 13 days from Marguina, (P. R.) Brings nothing new.

Also, schooner Horner, Macey, 18 days from Guadaloupe. Left there last instant, ship Joseph and Phoebe, Perkins, for Baltimore, ready to sail; brig Brilliant, Montferat, do. in 10 days; the Superior, Woodman, Philadelphia, in 2 days; Eliza, Mix, St. Thomas and New- delphia, same day; Milford, Handy, do. do. Julia Ann, Jackson, Alexandria, do. Somerset, Newell, Baltimore, 10 days. The French and Spanish fleet still lay at Port Royal, with troops on board, destination unknown. June 13, lat. 33, 3, long. 72, spoke the William and John, from Alexandria for Jamaica, out 5 days, all well. There was a report at Guadaloupe, received from St. Thomas's, that the French Admiral Gantheaume, from Brest, was seen steering for Jamaica, with 22 sail of the line.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21.

Extract of a letter from captain Bridges, of the brig Hannah, of Newburyport, to his owner, dated Fayal, April 6th, 1805.

"I arrived here on the 31st ult. The day before I got in, I was fired upon in a most barbarous manner by an English privateer, and received 2 very severe wounds in the groin and thigh, which I thank God are not likely to prove mortal, although anguish. In consequence of being disabled, and fruit being high and scarce I have sold my cargo for wines, and shall sail direct for Newburyport, as soon as my wounds will permit."
